

Autism, Discrimination and the Law - Half Day (3 Hours)

Overview

People on the autism spectrum often find themselves discriminated against. This may be direct discrimination such as not being offered a position in a workplace or more subtle such as finding it difficult to access a particular service or environment.

This course is ideal for anyone on the autism spectrum or people who support them. The course will identify the nature of discrimination and how people on the autism spectrum are often discriminated against. Our trainer will discuss the law around disability discrimination, particularly the Equality Act 2010 alongside suggestions for reasonable adjustments and how to ask for them.

Our experienced trainer has nearly 20 years' experience working as a specialist in the field of autism and behaviour. He uses a combination of short talks, video, workshop activities and group discussion to suit a range of learning styles and will happily welcome questions and offer supportive strategies throughout the course.

Learning Outcomes

At the end of this course attendees will:

- Know more about autism spectrum conditions.
 - Understand about discrimination.
 - Learn about people on the autism spectrum can be discriminated against.
 - Know about the law relating to discrimination and autism.
 - Learn how to make reasonable adjustments requests.
-